

Moriah Johnson, M.S. in National Security Affairs & International Relations: Graduated 2020

"I began working at the Department of Homeland Security in August 2019, a year into my program, after connecting with my current supervisor during a Career Day hosted by NSU. I graduated in June 2020 with a Master's in International Relations and National Security.

NSU played a pivotal role in launching my federal career, providing both strong academic preparation and valuable networking opportunities. The program also helped me clarify my long-term goal: to serve as a Foreign Affairs Officer with the Department of State. With this degree, that goal feels more attainable than ever."

Bryan M. Day, M.S in National Security Affairs: Graduated 2018

Bryan Day is an Intelligence Operations Specialist and Counterintelligence Analyst at the Department of Homeland Security. With over a decade of progressive experience in intelligence and counterintelligence operations, Mr. Day specializes in identifying and targeting threat actors across Southeast Asia, Central and South America, and the Middle East. His work reflects a deep commitment to national security and global threat mitigation.

Aprille McIntosh, M.S. in National Security Affairs & International Relations: Graduated 2020

"I enrolled in this program because it perfectly aligned with my goals for postgraduate education. Its innovative curriculum and fresh perspective made each semester engaging and intellectually rewarding. Diplomacy is my core interest, especially as global integration continues to grow. This program deepened my understanding of the field and expanded my analytical thinking and deepened by multidimensional approach to problem-solving skills.

Mentorships from Dr. Robin Cooper and Dr. Ransford Edwards enriched my perspective and sharpened my nuances of diplomacy." Aprille currently resides in Washington, D.C., where she works for a private defense contractor.
