4th Annual #PCSJ2025
PCSJ Conference

January 16 & 17, 2025

As civil society races to demand peaceful and durable political solutions to global conflicts, and as institutions continue to fail to be able to provide them, what is the role of peace and conflict resolution studies? Where can we find and foster hope in violent times? What role do nonviolent resistance, peace education, human rights education, and similar strategies play? How can dialogue, diplomacy, mediation, and other tools of conflict resolution offer hope? What extant theories can we turn to, or what theories do we need to co-create, to address current drivers of violence? In what ways do we need to better understand inequalities of power in order to interrupt and de-escalate violence? How can we more fully center voices that continue to be marginalized so as to better develop and sustain meaningful peace processes? Our 4th annual Peace and Conflict Studies Journal conference welcomes theory building, empirical research, and insights from practice that speak to these urgent questions.

Proposals and presentations are asked to explore this year's theme:

Deadline:
4/30/24

FINDING AND FOSTERING HOPE IN VIOLENT TIMES

Prospective presenters should submit a proposal (approx. 300 words) to the Journal by April 30, 2024. Visit https://nsuworks.nova.edu/pcs_conference/ to submit. The proposal should convey the findings, methodology (if applicable), and contributions of the study to the field of peace and conflict resolution. Qualitative, quantitative, and mixed-methods studies, as well as empirically-grounded practitioner perspectives, are welcomed.

Please specify if you plan to present on-campus or virtually.
